Endangered Moapa dace

The only place in the entire world to find this special fish, the Moapa dace, is right here in our back yard at the fragile habitat of the Moapa Valley National Wildlife Refuge. In May, movement of Moapa young from refuge streams of the main

Tip on Growing Primroses

Mexican Evening Primroses will grow like crazy and take over if given half a chance. A good solution is to put the plant in a pot. Tip the pot on its side when you want to give your tortoise a treat.

This method also works for a plant such as the Tufted Evening Primrose that the tortoise will eat up completely if you let it. Allow the tortoise to graze and then stand the pot upright before there's only a nub left!

Creative Tips on Introducing MegaDiet

- Soften MegaDiet to cookie dough consistency. Try unsweetened apple sauce or liquefied lettuce instead of water
- Grate apple to juicy state to soften MegaDiet. Yum!
- Soften and roll up in a grape leaf, rose petal or other favorite leaf (not lettuce)
- Hollow out half a cherry tomato and fill with softened MegaDiet
- Soften and stud the surface thickly with rose petals or desert willow flowers.
- Go cold turkey. No muss, no fuss.
- Email your tips to Kathy at kutiger@embarqmail.com

Remember that these tips are to get your tortoise started on MegaDiet. Later, gradually lessen the apple or juice so your tortoise eats plain MegaDiet.

Tortoise Group Educates Hundreds in an EGG-citing Way! By Mindy Pretner

Hundreds of children and adults learned about tortoises at an EggStravaganza hosted by the Grace Baptist Church on April 3. More than 1000 people attended the event at Duane Keller Middle School on Sunrise Mountain. “Our main focus was to tell families to get tortoises to safety if they are found in the street and to call the Pet Desert Tortoise Hotline, 488-9422. So many families told of finding tortoises in the wild and keeping them as pets, not realizing that it’s against the law to take a tortoise from the wild. And, they had no idea what a burrow was or what foods they should feed the tortoise!”

“Over 300 children take part in a coloring contest to win adorable stuffed tortoises” by M. Pretner

Jerry explained to families the importance of not releasing helium balloons into the air, relating how tortoises become tangled in the string or eat the brightly colored balloons that look like food.

Tortoise Group members Mindy Pretner, Jeremy Shugarman and Jerry Shupe interpreted informational tortoise posters for parents while the children colored tortoise pictures. Getting to meet Frieda and Freddy, the freeze-dried tortoises, was a big draw. At the end of the day, twelve children were thrilled to win stuffed tortoise animals, although they all REALLY wanted to take home Frieda!

You Are a Tortoise Caretaker

Under federal law, desert tortoises belong to the government! We don’t “own” them. Wow! We lucky people have the honor of caring for these exotic and special creatures. Tortoise Group, under permit from the U.S Fish & Wildlife Service (The Service) is the only organization permitted to adopt tortoises. The Service can make such a regulation because they are responsible for all desert tortoises in Nevada.

Want to learn more? Don’t miss the May 15 meeting. Roy Averill-Murray, Desert Tortoise Recovery Coordinator for The Service, talks about recovery in Nevada. Also, the video is terrific!

Field Trip to the Desert Tortoise Conservation Center April 18 by Kathy Utiger

Tortoise Group members gathered to listen as Dr. Paula Kahn, Conservation Program Manager, described the history of the Center, the wonderful support given by the San Diego, and many aspects of the day-to-day workings. We then split into three groups to tour the facility. It was a glorious day in the desert!

Paula says these pens require constant work.

Angie demonstrates the new covers for hatchling pens. The raven we saw won't get through this well-constructed barrier!

Rachel described caring for sick tortoises. (Infirmary in left rear building) Most of her patients had just been discharged!

Field Trip to:

Moapa Valley National Wildlife Refuge

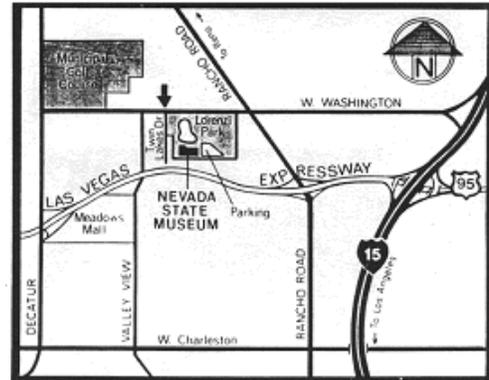

See the endangered Moapa dace fish in the lovely surroundings of the Moapa Valley refuge. This fragile habitat gem is located about 60 miles north of Las Vegas near Glendale. See story on page 1.

Directions: From Las Vegas, drive north on I-15 to Glendale (Exit 91). Go northwest on Highway 168 for 7.4 miles to Warm Springs Road. Turn left (southwest) on Warm Springs Road and drive for 1.4 miles more. The refuge is on your left where you see the chain link fence capped with barbed wire on both sides of the road. Allow at least one hour for the drive. Children welcome!

Call Kathy to sign up: 804-0472 or email kutiger@embarqmail.com.

Desert Tortoises and Survival

A Documentary Video

By Roy Averill-Murray, M.S.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

Desert Tortoise Recovery Coordinator

Though the Mojave Desert tortoise has thrived in the southwestern United States for thousands of years, its population has severely declined over the last four decades. A new USGS documentary explains why this important indicator of desert ecosystem health is declining and what scientists are doing to save them.

Roy will show the video and then answer questions on recovery of the desert tortoise in Nevada.

Why Isn't My Tortoise Using its Burrow?

Don't be concerned if your tortoise does not return to its burrow after a hard day of basking. The one thing a tortoise knows how to do is regulate its temperature by choosing places in the environment that does what the tortoise needs.

By early spring, the inside of the winter burrow has become quite cold. Now, your tortoise has started basking, slowly raising its body temperature by basking day after day. If the tortoise returned to the cold interior of the burrow, the tortoise would lose a lot of the heat its body had gained during the day. The burrow is colder than under a shrub or on the patio, or in the corner of the walls where the tortoise is doing its nighttime sleeping. So, in the morning, the tortoise is warmer than if it went into the burrow each night after a day in the sunshine.
